A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

In 2005 at Kenyon College, novelist David Foster Wallace delivered what is considered by many to be one of the best commencement speeches of all time. He began by noting two young fish swimming along when an older fish swam by and asked them how the water was. This prompted one of the young fish to look at the other and ask, "What the hell is water?" Wallace's point is that sometimes the most obvious realities are often the ones most difficult to recognize and talk about. He goes on to claim that living a compassionate life and being a good person require us to focus on the inner lives of others, which is difficult since our natural default setting tends to be one of selfishness. He makes the case that each of us has the power to choose an attitude of being kind to and doing what is best for others, which in turn makes the world better for everyone, including the one that chose that attitude.

I believe Wallace's premise helps explain why so many Crawford County organizations continue to work in silos rather than join forces, or even just collaborate. Stuck in this limiting default setting, they can only see how these unifications might affect them and their own identity, and can't see the "water" - the benefits that would come for all of us if we worked together as one. The default setting is "What do I want" rather than "What would be best for the entire community?"

Similarly, psychology professor John Jost wrote in his book, A Theory of System Justification, that humans are motivated to defend and justify systems even if these systems work against them. According to him, "people exhibit system - justifying tendencies to defend and rationalize existing ... arrangements - ...even at the expense of individual and collective self - interest." So according to this theory, people tend to see what exists as not just the way things are, but even as how they should be, which in turn (of course) reduces support for challenging the status quo.

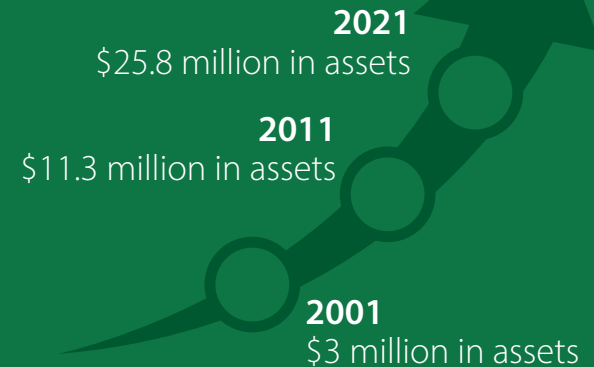

Seeing the value of collective impact and having more people working towards the same goals, our Foundation has been working closely with United Way of North Central Ohio to better align our two organizations' grant making processes. I commend our Board of Directors for being open to this change and trying to improve our processes in order to better serve the community, and I thank United Way for agreeing to be our partner in this endeavor. I also commend our local historical societies for recently forming the Crawford County History Alliance (CCHA) and realizing the impact of joining forces to take on community projects.

At the time of this writing, our Foundation has reached 100 funds, roughly doubling in size over the last eight years. Such tremendous growth can be contributed to several factors - the office that gave us "community presence," purposeful Board leadership, a generous community. But I feel that this growth can also be attributed to what Simon Sinek refers to in his book, Start With Why, as The Golden Circle. Sinek writes, "...The Golden Circle finds order and predictability in human behavior. Put simply, it helps us understand why we do what we do. The Golden Circle provides compelling evidence of how much more we can achieve if we remind ourselves to start everything we do by first asking why."

The capital T Truth is that Home is Why. Let us strive to make OUR why our default setting.

Regards,
Lisa Workman, CFRE
President

The Pride of Crestline – Crestline native William James “Gates” Brown spent 22 months in the Ohio State Reformatory in Mansfield for burglary. A guard there recognized his athletic ability, and Gates proceeded to play major league baseball for the Detroit Tigers from 1963-1975. Considered by many to be the best pinch hitter of all time, Gates helped lead Detroit to win the World Series in 1968.

Grey Squirrel – Native to eastern North America, this grey squirrel was spending the winter at Lowe Volk Park. These tree squirrels are essential natural forest regenerators. A scatter-hoarder, a grey squirrel will make thousands of caches each season to store food for later recovery. By turning their hind paws to grip tree bark, they can descend a tree head-first.

Harvey One Room School House – invites you to “experience the past, inspire the future.” On the National Register of Historic Places, Harvey is nestled in the cornfields on Caldwell Road outside of Bucyrus. Harvey was built in 1876 and restored in 2003. Touring visitors get to relive a typical school day in 19th century rural America. Numerous educators and volunteers lead the efforts to maintain the schoolhouse and share its heritage, and there is an endowment fund for Harvey at the Foundation that benefits those efforts.

A Tale of Two Trees – This weeping red bud in Carolyn's front yard in Crestline weathered an ice storm only to recover beautifully for spring. For the 10th year, Crestline was recognized as a 2021 Tree City USA by the Arbor Foundation. The benefits trees bring include cooler temps, cleaner air, higher property values and healthier residents. (Source: arborday.org)

Modern Farming – Hord Farms is a pig, cow and grain farm outside of Bucyrus, raising about 500 acres of barley and 400 acres of wheat every year. The crops raised help feed the animals and the straw from the wheat and barley is used for bedding for the cattle. Extra nutrients and fungicides are applied for better quality crops. In this photo, the field conditions aren't fit because of excessive spring rains, so the fungicide is being applied by a plane instead of a sprayer.

Predator of the Garden – A carnivore, the praying mantis has a voracious appetite and a preference for grasshoppers and beetles and other insects that coincidentally do the most damage to crops – a natural form of pest control! (However, they also eat beneficial insects!) While there are species native to North America, this one is a Chinese mantis introduced to help control insect pests, and they've become naturalized here. One of the most widespread and largest, this species can also eat animals like lizards and small birds. Niki photographed this master predator hiding in flowers at Unger Park.

“Goating” to the Fair – Brutus is a Boer goat raised in Bucyrus by Keri Brown’s son Carson as a 4-H market goat project. Boer goats were developed in South Africa and are bred mainly for meat production. You can see Brutus and other animals being raised with the hard work of over 550 local youth 4-H participants by visiting the Crawford County Fair every July. This capture of a goat’s curiosity won Keri the 2023 calendar photo contest!

Riverside Walk – Completed in 2020, the Levant Dawson Trail in Galion follows the path of the Olentangy River. The Olentangy eventually joins the Scioto River in downtown Columbus, and 22 miles of it are designated a State Scenic River by the Ohio Dept. of Natural Resources. Fun fact: the part of the Olentangy that flows through Marion County is called the Whetstone River.

“Moove” Over – Did you know that there are 8,500 head of cattle in Crawford County, 1,600 of which are milk cows? Ohio has 1,310,000 total head of cattle. That’s a lot of burgers, cheese and ice cream! (Source: Ohio Agricultural Statistics 2019-2020 Annual Bulletin) In all, there are over 900 different breeds of cattle in the world, and they are considered sacred in some world religions. Cattle stand up and sit down an average of 14 times a day – that’s a lot of “moovin”!

Autumn Beauty – The colorful fall trees at Lowe Volk Park beckon one to enter. The 38 acres that comprise the park encompass a variety of ecosystems. Lloyd Volk planted thousands of trees and was an excellent steward of the land before donating it to create the park. The over seven million acres of forestland in Ohio equal approximately 30% of the state. "In every walk with nature one receives far more than he seeks." – John Muir

The Veterans Memorial in Heise Park in Galion – has an inscription which reads, “The red of this stone symbolizes the blood that was shed and the unselfish sacrifices made by the men and women who bravely served to protect this country. Let us never forget what they gave for our freedom.” According to the U.S. Census Bureau, there are about 2,819 veterans living in Crawford County. On this year’s Veteran’s Day, thank one for his/her service!
