A MESSAGE FROM OUR PRESIDENT

The Merriam-Webster Dictionary definition of the term “radical” includes “very different from the usual or traditional, extreme.” While often viewed in a negative context, “radical” can be quite positive when combined with words like “radical connection,” “radical ownership,” and “radical generosity.”

At least that’s what authors Nathan Chappell, Brian Crimmins and Michael Ashley address in their book, The Generosity Crisis: The Case for Radical Connection to Solve Humanity’s Greatest Challenges. They cite a report by the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy which acknowledges that 66% of Americans gave to charity in 2000, which then dropped to 55% in 2014, then to 53% in 2016, and presently stands at less than half, or 49.6% of Americans giving to charity. And while fewer people are giving, those who do give, give less. The authors call on philanthropy to pivot from using wealth as an indicator for someone’s likeliness to give, and instead to look towards the depth of a prospect’s affinity for worthwhile causes, thus sustaining relationships and fostering “radical connection.”

While I won’t go into the depth here of what this trajectory could mean for the nonprofit industry (think hospitals, universities, zoos, museums, human services, churches, research, etc.), it is worth noting the possible causes which the authors indicate are contributing to this downward trend. ONE: The 2018 tax code change meant most lower and middle-income Americans now take the higher standard deduction rather than itemize their charity contributions – they have been disincentivized from giving. (Before the change, 46.2 million returns itemized in 2017, while only 16.7 million did so after the change (CNBC report).) TWO: The popularity of Donor Advised Funds opening at Fidelity Charitable have made it the largest nonprofit in the country, with dollars being contributed to and donated from each growing into the billions. THREE: Competition – not only between nonprofits in the United States, of which there are 1.8 million today, but also from the rise of philanthrocapitalism, where we are seeing corporations entice customers with their connection to and support of good causes and positive missions. FOUR: Declines in the number of people reporting religious affiliations/ church attendance AND overall happiness – both of which are indicators of generosity likelihood. FIVE: Growing distrust and misunderstanding of the nonprofit industry in general, while businesses are now considered the most trusted source of information.

At the Foundation, we were not immune to this giving decline, going from $915,664 in 2021 contributions to $807,224 in 2022. Still, our overall number of funds and dollars distributed in grants and scholarships continues to grow, thanks to those of you who show “radical ownership” in your relationships with the Foundation and our community. I was surprised and somewhat touched when I recently asked ChatGPT to describe the nonprofit industry and philanthropy. After a very thorough and accurate accounting of both, AI surmised its answer with “Overall, the nonprofit industry and philanthropy in the United States work hand in hand to address societal challenges, drive positive change, and improve the quality of life for individuals and communities. Their combined efforts contribute to a more equitable and compassionate society.”

In closing, I leave you with another quote to ponder – this one from Asha Curran, Co-Founder and CEO of #GivingTuesday, which was published during the recent pandemic. “Generosity must be at the heart of the society we rebuild together... What we need is ... radical generosity... an expression of mutuality, solidarity and reciprocity. Radical generosity transcends simply giving money... and challenges us to reimagine our world... as a place where we don’t just work harder to alleviate all harms but also one where we don’t tolerate them in the first place ...”

Regards,
Lisa Workman, CFRE
President

Sandusky Headwaters Preserve – is the newest park addition to the Crawford Park District, opening in 2021. A river's headwaters, also known as its source, is where the river begins. Adjacent to the headwaters are 38 acres of bottomland and wetland, wetland pools, vernal pools, a prairie, and old growth forest. A bench offers rest and nature watching.

Bucyrus Copper Kettle Works, Ltd. – dates back to 1874 and has been in the same building since 1879. A lost art, this is the last of the old copper shops in America that still produces handmade apple butter kettles, displaying beautiful craftsmanship. They even make the bowls for tympani drums used by major U.S. orchestras, including the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra. This capture of a moment in time won Adam the 2024 calendar photo contest!

Who Cooks For You? – That’s the distinctive call of the Barred Owl. This one at Aumiller Park is probably hunting from its perch and will silently swoop down on its prey – usually small mammals. Fun fact: historians believe Harriet Tubman used the Barred Owl’s calls as a signal for people using the Underground Railroad to come out of or stay in hiding. (Source: National Audubon Society)

Calm Before the Storm – April showers don't just bring May flowers, but the trees need them too, including this one on Marion Road in Bucyrus. For the 6th time last year, Bucyrus and its Tree Commission were named a Tree City USA by the OH Dept. of Natural Resources, Div. of Forestry. "Tree Cities," among other requirements, must hold an annual Arbor Day observance, which is typically in April. Ohio boasts the greatest number of Tree Cities in the country, and has for 45 years.

Oh Deer! – This young white-tailed deer was peeking out of dogwood. Deer typically have their young (fawns) from May-July. Fawns are born nearly scentless to protect them from predators. Mothers spend little time with them to aid this protection, returning only to nurse in carefully chosen hiding spots. Fawns are weaned from their mother at two months.

Preserving Our Rural Landscape – This barn on SR 19 near Galion has been torn down since this photo was taken. Ohio’s historic barns were built with the trees on farmers’ properties – most commonly white oak, tulip poplar, and American beech. While it is commonplace today for barns to be dismantled and their valuable parts sold, the nonprofit Friends of Ohio Barns encourages preservation of the state’s historic barns by connecting their owners with repair specialists.

Foolish Dragon Daylily – Despite their name, daylilies are not “true lilies.” Their botanical name is Hemerocallis, which comes from the Greek “hemera” (day) and “kallos” (beauty), as each flower lasts only one day. Peak bloom period in Crawford County is the month of July. The beauty of this blossom with the name Foolish Dragon has set the stage for a tree frog’s hope that it will draw a tasty insect.

Is it a Bird or a Bug? – The hummingbird moth is actually an insect! They begin as caterpillars, some of which eat tomato plants and thus draw ire from gardeners. This fast-moving moth, with its rapid wingbeat, mimics the hovering of a hummingbird. Instead of a beak like the hummingbird, it has a long tongue-like proboscis – double the length of its body – which rolls out of a coiled tube to reach nectar deep in flowers. Bill saw this one at Unger Park.

Peanut Thief – Don spotted this blue jay in his front yard stealing peanuts in the shell that were put out for squirrels. Blue jays exhibit a variety of noisy calls, often causing them to be heard before they're seen. According to the Bird Watchdog Academy, they are related to crows, can use tools, and are experts at mimicking.

Dueling Combines – are harvesting wheat near Sulphur Springs. Crawford County boasts 240,619 acres of farmland, ranking #9 in Ohio. That's 2.3% of the state total, and 1,937 farms. The most common crop is soybeans, which at 112,314 acres makes up 46.7% of the county's farmland. (Stats compiled using data from the Agriculture Department's Farm Service Agency.)

COMMUNITY LEGACY

Thank you to the following contributors that have arranged a planned gift to the Foundation. A planned gift is a contribution that a person decides to give at some future date, either a number of years from now or at death. There are many kinds of planned gifts, including but not limited to: bequests in a will, a trust, or an estate plan; charitable gift annuities; retirement funds; charitable remainder trusts; life estate contracts; charitable lead trusts; pooled income funds; life insurance; and non-cash assets and assets transferred using pay-on-death or transfer-on-death documents.
